About Jack Davison

Jack Davison (b.1990, Essex, United Kingdom) depicts the human figure, architecture, animals, objects, landscapes and townscapes; yet his subject is always photography itself. Uncovering the surreal and the sensual in everyday life, Davison's use of chiaroscuro, framing and exposure as instruments of abstraction draws on the history of photography.

Davison received his first major commission from Kathy Ryan, photography editor of the New York Times, in 2016. His publication Photographs (Loose Joints, 2016) is now in its third reissue. Solo exhibitions include Photographic Etchings, Cob Gallery, 2022 and Revisiting Pictures at FOAM, Amsterdam, 2016. In 2024, Davison's works were acquired for permanent collection at the National Portrait Gallery, London.

About Samar Abu Elouf

Samar Abu Elouf was born and raised in the Gaza Strip. A self-taught photojournalist, she has worked in Gaza since 2010, documenting daily life, news and the profound effects of conflict on her country.

Previously, Samar covered the 2018–2019 Gaza border protests, the so-called Great March of Return, as well as the fighting between Israel and Hamas in May 2021, which destroyed essential infrastructure and killed more than 230 people, including several of her own relatives.

In 2023 she chronicled one of the deadliest military campaigns in modern history for The New York Times: Israel's strikes on and subsequent invasion of Gaza in the aftermath of the October 7th Hamas attacks. Like many Palestinian journalists working in Gaza, Samar was simultaneously enduring a war while also documenting it. She won numerous awards for her powerful images.

She previously worked with Reuters, NZZ Swiss Magazine, Middle East Eye and others.

About Aldo Fallai

Born in Florence in 1943, Aldo Fallai lives and works in his native city and in Milan. With a diploma from the Istituto d'Arte in Florence, where he later teaches, he opened a graphic design studio with photographer Mario Strippini and began to approach photography himself. In the mid-1970s he met Giorgio Armani, who was making his debut as a designer at the beginning of the global affirmation of Made in Italy, to which Fallai's photography contributed significantly. His first assignment from Armani marked the start of a collaboration that continued for almost thirty years.

Fallai made his name as a fashion photographer with a disenchanted and unconventional style. Having achieved international fame, Fallai also worked for other labels and his reportages appear regularly in the Italian and international fashion titles. In the 1980s he began to address the icons of the history of art and the portrait genre, which he links to fashion in a highly personal synthesis. Tuscan Mannerism, Caravaggio, the Pre-Raphaelites and the exoticism of the French orientalists have been identified by critics as Fallai's artistic inspirations. He has published several photography books, including Almost One Year (1993), In Fabbrica (2007) and From Giorgio Armani to Renaissance (2014).

About Lebohang Kganye

Lebohang Kganye is a visual artist and photographer from Johannesburg, South Africa, where she currently lives and works.

Although primarily a photographer, her interest in the materiality of photography is ongoing and explored in myriad ways through her use of the sculptural, performative, theatrical and the moving image. Kganye's work has explored themes of personal history and ancestry whilst resonating with the history of South Africa and apartheid, specifically by incorporating the archival and performative into a practice that centers storytelling and memory as it plays out in the familial experience. While her work may resonate with a particularly South African experience, it critically engages with oral tradition as form and memory, as a tangible source material. Kganye mainly uses her family archive to explore and re-enact notions of home and belonging and employs narrative to tell stories of home, refuge, family and identity.

Lebohang Kganye is currently completing her Masters in Fine Arts at the Witwatersrand University in Johannesburg. She studied fine arts at the University of Johannesburg (2016) and photography at the Market Photo Workshop (2011). Kganye is the recipient of the Deutsche Börse Foundation Prize, 2024 for her exhibition Haufi Nyana? I've Come to Take you Home, which took place at FOAM, Amsterdam (2023). Other notable recent awards include the FOAM Paul Huf Award, 2022, Grand Prix Images Vevey, 2021/22 and Camera Austria Award, 2019.

About Nanna Heitmann

Nanna Heitmann is a German documentary photographer and a full member of Magnum Photos. She is one of the few Western photographers covering Russia as it wages Europe's biggest war of conquest since World War II, documenting both its devastation and the stark dissonance between the war's horrors and Moscow's glorified, distorted narratives.

Her earlier work explores themes of human resilience and environmental crises, including the impact of climate change in Siberia (As Frozen Lands Burn) and the Congo Basin's peatlands (Beneath The Trees). Heitmann is a regular contributor to The New York Times and has been published in National Geographic, The New Yorker, Time and M Le Magazine du Monde. Her visual journalism has earned numerous accolades, including the Olivier Rebbot Award for her coverage of Russia's Covid crisis and a World Press Photo Award for her series on wildfires.

She joined Magnum as a nominee in 2019 with Weg vom Fenster, a project on Germany's last coal miners, and Hiding From Baba Yaga, a journey along Siberia's Yenisei River capturing lives in remote villages. In 2024, she was named a Pulitzer Prize finalist.

In addition, he has documented the Israeli Defence Forces and Elite Counter-Terror units.
